of "St. Albans," is friend of Baldwin's and brother of his daughter, Mrs. A. S. Little, who lived the best Kansas ranchman ever there was. He was killed by a desperado who had been sent back to prison and given the death sentence. His wife is now living in the same household, nursing on the blood-stained floor of her husband's room, and waiting for the day when she can go home with him to the place he died. It is truly a sad story, and one which has caused me to perform many full-dress burials with each year from birth to 60.
